

Focus on Consequences for Adults

People often come to the attention of courts, employers, and counselors for exhibiting behaviors which may be early warning signs of an alcohol, other drug, or behavioral addiction. Yet a large number of these people do not undergo any formal education. More often than not, they slip through gaps in the current continuum of services

Focus on Consequences helps to serve this frequently overlooked population. For many, a brief intervention can initiate a process of self-reflection conducive to behavioral change. Others may benefit from a referral for diagnostic assessment to determine if they require a higher level of care.
